ORGANIZATIONAL OVERVIEW

Campus Climate Network (CCN) is revitalizing the student climate movement. We are building a coalition of student-led climate justice groups fighting to cut ties with the fossil fuel industry and its enablers. We provide students with the training, resources, and connections they need to run winning campaigns on campus and become the next generation of climate justice leaders.

Labor & Climate Coordinator

Commitment: Fall 2024-May 2025
Pay: $1,000 stipend (eligible for $500 need-based) per semester (stipend amount may be adjusted depending on start date)
Time commitment: 5-15 hours/week

Opportunities for collaboration between campus-based student climate groups are potentially strategic, yet unexplored. The Labor & Climate Coordinator will be responsible for promoting the intersection of labor and climate justice on campuses. The Labor & Climate coordinator will develop content and training based on the intersections between the labor movement on campuses and the campaign priorities of CCN student-led groups. The Labor & Climate coordinator will also develop relationships with unions and labor justice organizations at a national level. The Labor & Climate Coordinator will sit on the Planning Committee, which meets regularly to make important decisions on the strategic direction of CCN.

Qualifications:

- At least one semester of experience on a campus-based campaign rooted in climate justice and/or aligned causes. Current members of the Campus Climate Network coalition are especially encouraged to apply.
- A commitment to climate justice.
- Able to self motivate for independent remote work.
- Excellent organizational and communication skills.
- Experience with Slack, Google Drive, etc.

Responsibilities:

- Develop informational resources on the intersections between labor and climate organizing to be shared with the wider CCN coalition.
- Form relationships with unions and labor justice organizations at a national level, particularly those with a campus component.
- Develop content, training, and coaching to support labor and climate organizing on campuses, with an emphasis on building solidarity with and advancing campaigns through university-based unions
- Move the public conversation on labor and climate organizing on campuses by placing op-eds, hosting trainings, panels, and discussion sessions.
- Join the CCN cohort for the Skills to Win course (2 hours/week/6 weeks from Sep-Oct 2024).
- Attends Planning Committee calls 1-2 times per month to weigh in on the day-to-day priorities and strategic direction of Campus Climate Network.

To apply:

- Interested applicants are required to fill out this application form.
- Applications for this position are rolling. We will close the application once we feel we have received sufficient applications. If you are interested, apply ASAP for the best chance of receiving an interview.
